Copyright Statement

The digital copy of this thesis is protected by the Copyright Act 1994 (New Zealand).

This thesis may be consulted by you, provided you comply with the provisions of the Act and the following conditions of use:

- Any use you make of these documents or images must be for research or private study purposes only, and you may not make them available to any other person.
- Authors control the copyright of their thesis. You will recognise the author's right to be identified as the author of this thesis, and due acknowledgement will be made to the author where appropriate.
- You will obtain the author's permission before publishing any material from their thesis.

To request permissions please use the Feedback form on our webpage. http://researchspace.auckland.ac.nz/feedback

General copyright and disclaimer

In addition to the above conditions, authors give their consent for the digital copy of their work to be used subject to the conditions specified on the Library Thesis Consent Form.
INDEPENDENS LONG VANUATU:
THE CHURCHES AND POLITICS IN A MELANESIAN NATION

by

Michael David Myers

A thesis
presented to the University of Auckland in partial fulfilment of the requirements for the degree of Doctor of Philosophy in Anthropology

Private Bag
Auckland
New Zealand
(c) M.D. Myers, 1984
ABSTRACT.

In this dissertation I examine the relationship between the churches and politics in Vanuatu, focusing in particular on the role of the Christian churches in the independence movement of the 1970s. I also look at the political involvement of the churches in the two years immediately following national independence. The dissertation is based on fieldwork in Vanuatu from April 1981 to June 1982.

In Chapter I, I introduce and defend my national, institutional perspective on the churches. In Chapter II, I discuss the history of Vanuatu, focusing specifically on the history of the missions up to the end of the 1960s. Chapter III looks at the independence movement and recent political history. In Chapter IV I examine the relationship between the churches and politics in two contrasting rural areas: at the Catholic mission station of Walarano, Malakula, and at the Presbyterian area of White Sands, Tanna. Chapter V is concerned with the ecumenical movement in the Pacific and looks at the support of the Pacific churches for the independence movement in Vanuatu.

Chapters VI to X are parallel histories of the same period. They all look at the involvement of the churches in Vanuatu politics from about the beginning of the 1970s - when the independence movement began - up to national independence on 30 July 1980. However, each chapter is written from a different perspective. Chapter VI documents the political involvement of the Presbyterian Church; Chapter VII is concerned with Bishop Rawcliffe and the politics of Anglicanism; Chapter VIII looks at the political role of the Roman Catholic Church in Vanuatu; Chapter IX focuses mostly on the relationship between the Churches of Christ and Nagriamel; and Chapter X takes a look at the ecumenical movement in Vanuatu and the origins and development of the New Hebrides Christian Council.
In Chapter XI I examine the post-independence developments in all the major churches. Chapter XII concludes with a discussion of three issues: localisation, independence and unity, both in the churches and in the nation.
ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

There are many people in Vanuatu who helped me with this project. Although it is almost impossible to name everyone, I would like to thank all those who agreed to be interviewed, most of whom were very open despite the political turmoil of previous years. I would also especially like to thank, for their friendship, warm hospitality and practical help: Kirk Huffman and Jack Keitadi of the Vanuatu Cultural Centre; Ps. Philip Shing; Ps. Paiaporou Antfalo; Ps. Peter Barnes; Rev. Ken and Anne Calvert; Bishop Harry Tevi; Fr John Bani; Fr Thomas and Mabel Butu; Ps. August and Maelene Ben; Kay Williams; Jack Murphy; Ken and Betty Rabarts; Sisters Joan Hardiman, Patrice Bolger and Sandra Winton; Fr Bert Soucy; Gilbert Gibson; Michael Matoa and Ps. Philip and Toutek Lani.

Thanks are due to many people and institutions for allowing me to quote from their archival collections. Special mention must be made of the staff at the following church offices: the Presbyterian Church Office, Vila; the Anglican Church Office, Luanville; the Churches of Christ Office, Luanville; the Office of the Joint Board for Mission Overseas, Auckland; the Melanesian Trust Board Office, Auckland. I also gratefully acknowledge Rev. Ken Calvert's permission to quote from his correspondence files at the Presbyterian mission house at White Sands, Tanna; Rev. Rex Davis' permission to quote from two of his unpublished reports; and the permission of the Vanuatu Christian Council to quote from minutes of council meetings.

I am grateful to the University Grants Committee for the award of a Postgraduate Scholarship and for funding the fieldwork on which this study is based. I must also express gratitude to the Ministry of Social Affairs of the Government of Vanuatu for granting me research permission. I am indebted to the Department of Statistics of the Vanuatu Government and to the Office de la Recherche Scientifique et Technique Outre-Mer, Vila, for access to photocopying facilities. I also appreciate the assistance of Caroline Phillips for drawing the maps, of Val Bailey and Andree Brett for help with photographic work, and of Margaret Mutu-Grigg for help with word processing.
My supervisors, Nancy Bowers and Max Rimoldi, have given me encouragement and support at all stages of the work. I am very grateful to them for their detailed comments on the manuscript and for making many valuable suggestions. I am also indebted to Ian Frazer for commenting on the text, to Keith Barber for discussing and clarifying some of the theoretical issues, and to Michael Allen for his encouragement and critical comments on Chapter IX. I would like to thank Peter Crowe and Rev. Graham Horwell for their help before I left for the field.

Finally, I am profoundly grateful to my wife, Kathleen, for accompanying me to Vanuatu and for typing up my field notes and notes from interviews. Back in Auckland, she has corrected my translations and checked earlier drafts of the manuscript and, for the past eight months, lovingly cared for our baby daughter while I spent many hours writing.
Figure 1. MAP OF VANUATU: Map of Vanuatu showing the four administrative districts before independence, and the partition of the islands between the Presbyterian and Melanesian Missions, 1881.
Figure 2. MAP OF MALAKULA
Figure 3. MAP OF TANNA

Figure 4. MAP OF AOB
Table of Contents

CHAPTER I - INTRODUCTION .................................................. 1
  Some theoretical considerations ........................................... 2
  Some of the major themes .................................................. 19
  The religious groups of Vanuatu ........................................... 21
  Church government ............................................................ 23
  Fieldwork and research methods .......................................... 30
  Some opposition to the research .......................................... 32

CHAPTER II - A POLITICAL HISTORY OF THE MISSIONS AND COLONIALISM IN VANUATU .................................................. 37
  A HISTORY OF THE MISSIONS UP TO WORLD WAR II ....................... 38
    Early missionary endeavour ............................................. 38
    The lobbying begins ..................................................... 45
    The missions become more firmly established ....................... 50
    The Protestants train native church workers ....................... 52
    The John Frum movement on Tanna ..................................... 56
  THE MISSIONS AFTER WORLD WAR II ......................................... 58
    The development of Education ........................................... 59
    Real localisation of the churches ..................................... 61
    Mission and colonial history in perspective ......................... 68

CHAPTER III - THE INDEPENDENCE MOVEMENT AND RECENT POLITICAL HISTORY .................................................. 71
  THE FINAL YEARS OF THE CONDOMINIUM .................................... 71
    The different interests of the British and French .................. 71
    The increasing participation of ni-Vanuatu in national politics 73
    The formation of political parties in the 1970s ..................... 76
    The ni-Vanuatu leadership of the main political parties .......... 82
    The creation of a francophone elite .................................. 83
    The Municipal Elections of August 1975 .............................. 87
    The 1975 General Elections ............................................. 87
    The 1977 Elections and the PPG ....................................... 90
    The 1979 Elections ...................................................... 96
  THE BIRTH AND INFANCY OF THE NEW NATION .............................. 99
    The rebellion .............................................................. 99
    Independence on 30 July 1980 .......................................... 103
    The rebellion analysed .................................................. 106
    The first years after independence ................................... 112
    National unity ............................................................ 116
    Recent political history summarised .................................. 121

CHAPTER IV - INSTITUTIONAL RELIGION AND POLITICS IN TWO RURAL AREAS .................................................. 123
  WALARANO ................................................................. 124
    Background ............................................................... 125
    Opposition to the PPG .................................................. 128
    The economic monopoly of the Catholics .............................. 130
    The Walarano Water Supply Project .................................. 133
    The rebellion at Walarano .............................................. 137
  WHITE SANDS, TANNA ....................................................... 144
    Rev. Calvert’s new initiative .......................................... 145
    The Four Corner movement ............................................. 150
    Opposition to SDA evangelical activities ............................. 152
    Further political developments on Tanna ............................. 153
The Presbyterian/French Residency opposition .............................................. 153
The post-independence situation on Tanna .................................................... 156
Both case studies in perspective ..................................................................... 159

CHAPTER V - THE PACIFIC CHURCHES AND THEIR SUPPORT FOR INDEPENDENCE IN VANUATU .................................................. 165
THE EMERGENCE OF ECUMENISM IN THE PACIFIC ..................................... 166
The ecumenical movement and the Pacific Conference of Churches .............. 166
The SPADES Conference .............................................................................. 169
More meetings, seminars and overseas trips ............................................... 172
Pacifique '77 ................................................................................................. 174
THE CONSOLIDATION OF PACIFIC ECUMENISM ........................................ 176
An initiative of FPSP is rejected ................................................................... 176
Moral and financial support for the VP ......................................................... 177
Pacific church leaders' meeting ..................................................................... 179
The implications of regional ecumenism for Vanuatu today ......................... 181

CHAPTER VI - THE PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH AND POLITICS IN THE 1970s .......................................................... 183
THE LAST YEARS OF EXPATRIATE CONTROL .................................................. 184
The commitment of the church to national independence ......................... 184
The General Assembly of 1973 .................................................................... 186
NI-VANUATU CONTROL OF THE PCNH ..................................................... 191
The new political direction of the church ....................................................... 193
The promotion of Bislama ............................................................................ 196
The political activities of the church continue .............................................. 198
The Curtis affair ............................................................................................ 199
The development of liberal theology ............................................................ 200
The PCNH increases the pressure for independence ..................................... 201
The Nation-Building Education Programme ................................................. 204
The block-grant issue .................................................................................... 206
The People's Provisional Government .......................................................... 207
The Kalsakau Government .......................................................................... 213
Preparations for independence .................................................................... 214
The political role of the PCNH reviewed ...................................................... 218

CHAPTER VII - BISHOP RAWCLIFFE AND THE POLITICS OF ANGLICANISM ..................................................... 221
THE SOUTHERN ARCHDEACONRY ................................................................. 221
Localisation .................................................................................................. 223
The church opposes Nagriamel ..................................................................... 225
The New Hebrides National Party ................................................................. 226
French paranoia ............................................................................................ 229
The church and the administration ............................................................... 231
From Archdeacon to Bishop Rawcliffe ......................................................... 232
Continuing Anglican support for the NHNP ............................................... 233
THE DIOCESE OF THE NEW HEBRIDES ...................................................... 235
The Roosevelt Brown episode ..................................................................... 236
The vocal bishop ........................................................................................... 238
Political tensions explode in Santo ............................................................... 240
The separation of church and politics? .......................................................... 244
The Langana People's Centre ...................................................................... 246
Bishop Rawcliffe at odds with his ni-Vanuatu priests ..................................... 247
The VP flag at Lolowai ................................................................................ 248
Overseas support .......................................................................................... 253
The Kalsakau Government ......................................................................... 254
Independence approaches .......................................................................... 255
The Santo troubles re-surface ...................................................................... 257
Bishop Harry Tevi takes over ...................................................................... 259
The political role of the Anglican Church in perspective ............................. 261

CHAPTER VIII - ROMAN CATHOLIC NEUTRALITY? ........................................ 263
THE REIGN OF BISHOP JULLIARD ................................................................. 263
The church and the French connection ......................................................... 264
The church sanctions gradual political development .................................... 269
Ni-Vanuatu become anglophones or francophones ...................................... 271
The non-involvement of the church in politics ............................................. 276

xii INDEPENDENS LONG VANUATU: THE CHURCHES AND POLITICS IN A MELANESIAN NATION
The delegation of ni-Vanuatu churchmen to Europe ........................................ 278
Bishop Julliard retires ...................................................................................... 280

THE CHURCH UNDER BISHOP LAMBERT ......................................................... 282
Bishop Francis Lambert takes over ............................................................... 282
The francophone political opposition ......................................................... 283
Bishop Lambert’s new initiative ................................................................. 286
The church at odds with ecumenism and with Catholics in Australia and New Zealand 287
The church prepares for independence ......................................................... 291
The political role of the Catholic Church reviewed .................................... 293

CHAPTER IX - THE CHURCHES OF CHRIST AND NAGRIAMEL ............... 295
EXPARTIATE CONTROL OF THE INSTITUTION ........................................... 295
An institutional perspective on the Churches of Christ at Nduindui .......... 295
The limitations of Allen’s local-level perspective ....................................... 297
The opposition to kastom ............................................................................ 300
The suspicion of government ..................................................................... 301
The birth of the Nagriamel movement ....................................................... 302
The alliance with Nagriamel emerges ......................................................... 303
Nagriamel and the Administration ............................................................. 304
Opposition to Nagriamel develops ............................................................. 305
The French support Nagriamel .................................................................. 306

THE CONFERENCE TAKES OVER ................................................................. 308
The pastors gain in influence ....................................................................... 310
A serious split occurs .................................................................................. 312
The independence of the Nagriamel Federation ......................................... 322
The PPG and the Kalsakau Government .................................................... 324
The increasing power of the conference .................................................... 325
The Nagriamel Royal Church .................................................................... 326
Independence nears ..................................................................................... 327
Electoral manoeuvrings ............................................................................. 328
Independence celebrations and the rebellion .......................................... 329
The relationship between the Churches of Christ and Nagriamel in perspective 330

CHAPTER X - THE NEW HEBRIDES CHRISTIAN COUNCIL ...................... 339
ECUMENISM IN ITS INFANCY ......................................................................... 340
The inauguration and establishment of the council .................................... 340
The united voice of the council? ................................................................. 341
Restrictions on other religious groups ....................................................... 342

THE CONSOLIDATION OF ECUMENISM ...................................................... 347
The Pacific Churches’ Research Centre ...................................................... 347
Submissions concerning the Constitution .................................................. 348
NIFC advocates VP proposals on decentralisation .................................... 349
Further development of the council ......................................................... 350
Independence ............................................................................................... 351
Ecumenism in Vanuatu in perspective ....................................................... 352

CHAPTER XI - POST-INDEPENDENCE DEVELOPMENTS IN THE CHURCHES 355
THE PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH OF VANUATU .............................................. 356
Church leaders enter government .............................................................. 357
Criticism of the new government .............................................................. 358
The new church leaders ............................................................................ 359
The decline in membership ...................................................................... 360
Moves towards greater centralisation of power ........................................ 361
PCV aspirations for financial independence ............................................. 362
The ecumenical thrust continues ............................................................... 363

THE ANGLICAN CHURCH ............................................................................. 364
The church headquarters are moved to Luganville ................................ 365
Anglican support for the Lini government ................................................ 366
New converts in Santo bush ...................................................................... 367
DOV aspirations for financial independence ............................................. 368
DOV support for ecumenism ..................................................................... 369

THE ROMAN CATHOLIC CHURCH ................................................................. 370
The aftermath of the rebellion ................................................................. 371
Priests at odds with the Vanuatu Government .......................................... 372
Economic independence for the local church? ........................................ 373

Table of Contents xiii
The pressure of ecumenism ........................................... 393
THE CHURCHES OF CHRIST IN NDUINDUI ......................... 395
The rebellion is quelled in Nduindui ............................... 395
The Conference desires more independence ..................... 400
Nagriamel adherents return to the fold ......................... 401
The inauguration of the Nduindui Area Council ............... 402
The rivalry with Lolowai .......................................... 403
Ecumenical involvement ......................................... 404
THE VANUATU CHRISTIAN COUNCIL .......................... 405
The VCC is critical of the government ......................... 405
VCC opposition to new 'divisions' ............................... 410
The land problem .............................................. 418
The Social Concerns Committee .................................. 419
Post-Independence Developments summarised .......... 419

CHAPTER XII - CONCLUSION .................................. 425

APPENDIX A - POPULATION FIGURES OF THE MAJOR ISLANDS . 453

APPENDIX B - LIST OF ABBREVIATIONS ......................... 455

BIBLIOGRAPHY .................................................. 459

PHOTOGRAPHS .................................................. 485
List of Illustrations

Figure 1. MAP OF VANUATU .................................................. viii
Figure 2. MAP OF MALAKULA ................................................. ix
Figure 3. MAP OF TANNA .................................................. x
Figure 4. MAP OF AOBA .................................................. x